Care and Compassion in Healthcare: Does spirituality have a role?

27th – 28th April 2014
Venue: Sarum College, Salisbury

Benefits of attending:

This is a unique event aimed at all specialists working in healthcare to reflect upon their current practice and to consider how care and compassion can be increased in their role and daily routine. This meeting is not a Christian led conference, but will instead reflect on how the nature of spirituality can be worked into all healthcare job roles.

The conference will be set in the tranquil location of Sarum College, Salisbury, and will enable participants the chance to assess their existing practice and to extend their thinking beyond guidelines and routine compliance, so that they can engage with patients more effectively.

Participants will get the most out of this event by attending the whole meeting from Sunday afternoon on 27th April, through to Monday 28th April, where all attendees will come together in an interactive setting to participate in roundtable discussions, take part in workshops and contribute to different perspectives of how care and compassion can be improved in healthcare for the benefit of patients.
